

PRESS RELEASE

The review ETVDES celebrates 150 years of its foundation

Founded by the Jesuits in 1856, the review ETUDES is celebrating its 150th anniversary this year, especially on Tuesday 13th of June with an anniversary celebration in the House of UNESCO for its subscribers.

It currently has a circulation of 15 000 copies, and 16% of its subscribers reside outside France.

ETVDES - a monthly dedicated to current affairs and their background

Every month, using talented writers of various disciplines, ETUDES offers reflection while giving background and analysis, a perspective more necessary than ever in the midst of “information overload”.

150 years of intellectual debate

ETUDES remains to-day one of the places of fundamental interrogation of ideological systems, injustice, and how we think about ourselves to-day. It deals with the constant debate on freedom and truth, the place of religion in our society, the role of faith in relation to culture.

We understand culture in the wider sense - literature, paintings, music, theatre, movies and books - as the place where we can re-examine and transform our cultural heritage. Religion and spirituality are part of this.

A French cultural point of view open to other perspectives

One of the main objective of the Review is to understand the world around us. Its international section is especially rich. We make the effort to observe the life of the world with a critical discernment, in order to ensure a just and human life for all people to-day, not just in Europe, but in America, in Africa or in Asia.
